Firhall is a small place in Scotland. It is an interesting place for us to travel because of two reasons. First, it is really a beautiful and quiet place. Second, it is a place that has too many rules.

Firhall isn't a city. It is only a village. There are a lot of birds and trees there. You can also do many sports, like volleyball, basketball and golf.

But children don't like this place. They call it "child-hating ogres". That is because of the rules in the village.

People can't have animals in their homes and each family can only have one dog. People in this village must be over forty-five years old. If grandchildren visit their grandparents, they can't stay for long.

Now, things are getting better. Grandchildren are welcome to live. And if you are under forty-five years old, you can also live here. People only want to have a quiet place to live in. Most old people like this kind of quiet place.
