十、阅读短文，选择最佳选项。

Shhh, it's sleeping. Is it hibernating? A tree squirrel, like this red squirrel in Scotland, doesn't hibernate during the winter. Hibernating is animals spending winter in a deep sleep. Most ground squirrels like hibernating, but the red squirrel cares about where it sleeps. It builds its home in the hole of an evergreen tree, high above the ground. This little sleeper is using its tail to keep warm. In winter, its orange-red fur is often coloured with a little grey.

In Scotland and elsewhere in the United Kingdom, the native (本土的) red squirrel is threatened (威胁) by the North American grey squirrel. The North American grey squirrel takes food and living space from the red squirrel. While there are millions of the North American grey squirrels in the UK, only 120,000 to 160,000 red squirrels live, about three-quarters of them in Scotland.

- () 66. What does hibernate mean in the passage?
- A. Playing all the time in winter.
- B. Sleeping all the time in spring.
- C. Sleeping all the time during the winter.
- () 67. Where does the red squirrel build its home?
- A. In the cave of a hill.
- B. In the underground hole.
- C. In the hole of an evergreen tree.
- () 68. How does the sleeping red squirrel keep warm?
- A. Uses its tail.
- B. Eats nuts.
- C. Gets fat.
- () 69. When is the red squirrel's fur coloured with a little grey?
- A. In spring.
- B. In winter.
- C. In summer.
- () 70. Who takes living space and food from the red squirrel in the UK?
- A. The big cat.
- B. The black bird.
- C. The grey squirrel.
- () 71. Why did the writer write the story?
- A. To tell you about red squirrels.
- B. To show the love to red squirrels.
